Will I be changed by "success"?
Will it go to my big stupid head?

It's the story of Jack the Ripper. I'm not sure why they needed to buy any movie rights since it's a much retold historical event and the chances of the details of our version not getting changed around must surely be slim.

I think the bookkeeping has to show that an idea or property has been purchased otherwise the investors might think nothings doing and somebodys pulling a fast one.

It's the Information Age and our graphic novel is an access route to the information. Who'd have thought all that time rummaging in Victorian detritus would pay off? The movie deal started at Disney/Touchstone but they wanted a happy ending.

Then New Line had it while Sean Connery was eagerly sought for the role of the copper. Somebody else has got it now. This is all normal.

There must be a lot of people out there making good livings from not making movies. Myself, I just got paid my share of another year's option money. Thirty thousand bucks in my account.

Now I'm worried about the amount of tax they're going to amputate, with the end of the financial year only two weeks away.
